Problem Montelpy Boart Association

Twelve months out of each year, the Mississippi Heart Association considers ways and means to curb the terrible death toll from heart diseast. During those 12 months last year, more than 49 per cent of the deaths in Mississippi resulted from heart and blood vessel diseases.

One of the weapons in heart-defense is research. Last year, the heart association allocated nearly $50,000 for heart research in Mississippi, including funds set aside for the establishment of a cardiovascular chair at the University Medical Center.

Are these things important? Three observations cause us to say that they are highly important to every citizen in Mississippi.

First, we observe that this research money can help Mississippi scientists to find ways of ultimately preventing heart disease and relieving it today.

There is little doubt but that heart research is an extremely personal matter. The reason that it is personal stems from the fact that a husband, a brother, the woman loved in our homes, are potential heart victims. Even little children die or are crippled for life from congenital or rheumatic heart disease.

The second observation is that while man's life expectancy has been lengthened 10 years during the past two decades, deaths attributable to heart and blood vessel diseases continue to increase. Last year, 10,527 Mississippians fell into this death category - 1,000 more than the year before.

The third observation can be made through study of a map which reveals the county-by-county death toll. As we see this toll averaged out by counties, we find that Hinds County dug 1,038 graves for heart victims last year. Warren County dug 338 such graves. The graves dug in Rankin County totaled 190; in Harrison, 439; in Pike, 196; in Jones, 325; in Bolivar, 307; Washington, 394; Leflore, 299: Lauderdale, 431.

Aside from the grief and heartache, the broken family ties, widowed women and orphaned children, this toll represents a tremendous economic loss to our state and to our people.

It follows, therefore, that the Mississippi Heart Association is rendering a human as well as an economic service when it seeks funds during its annual drive month which is February to expand upon heart education, research and service so that more of our friends and loved ones can be saved from this mass killer. And who knows but that the next Mississippi heart victim may be the person whose name is used when we sign a bank check?
